ELECTRIC IRON FOR HIS SHIRTS

Progressive Rush County
Farmer Utilizes Power
in Many Ways

CAN CURL HIS HAIR

Churn Milk, Light the Farm, Run
Machinery and do the Family Washing

Thanks to Ben Franklin flying his kite—not after the manner that men fly their kites now, however—the farmers are reaping many benefits from electricity as well as the city folk, who enjoy lighted streets, street cars, factory power, etc.

Right here in old Rush county, one of our progressive farmers, A. P. Walker, is now installing an electric plant, harnessing a great power, and will utilize it in many ways.

When the plant is installed and equipped, Mr. Walker will not only use electricity to ride back and forth to his farm—Jersey Isle Stock farm—but he will light his premises and run various machines about the place, and in addition will run a washing machine, a contrivance to do the family ironing, cigar lighter and curling irons, a churning apparatus and in many other ways will make good use of that great modern force.

UNFORTUNATE GIRL WELL KNOWN HERE

False Stories Have Been Circulated Regarding Death of Connersville Girl

Miss Lillian Mulheeran, of Connersville, who died in a rooming house in Cincinnati Sunday night, under mysterious circumstances, had many friends in Rushville, and in former years was a frequent visitor here.

Reuben Conner, an attorney, who made an investigation of the case says that the coroner who made a post mortem examination declared that nothing criminal was disclosed, and that the stories in the Cincinnati and Indianapolis newspapers were highly colored and sensational. The report that she was soon to become a mother was also found to be untrue.

WORK OF THE NAVAJO INDIANS WAS DISPLAYED

When Mrs. Davis Read Her Paper on "Our Americans" at the Aid Society

The Ladies Aid Society of St. Paul's M. E. church met at the home of Mrs. John B. Winship, in West Fifth street this afternoon. Mrs. George Davis read a paper on "Our Americans" (Alaskians and Indians) which was made all the more interesting by the introduction of a number of displays of Navajo Indian work.

RUSHVILLE MAN IN A LOBBY AT WASHINGTON

A. P. Walker spent last week in Washington, D. C., with a number of prominent cattle breeders, where they talked to the national legislation on questions pertinent to amended legislation on the importation of cattle.

LARGE AUDIENCE AT THE PRESBYTERIAN MEETINGS

Much Interest is Being Manifested in The Week of Prayer

The meetings being held at the First Presbyterian church this week, are exceedingly interesting and are well attended. The pastor has thus far taken up the topics suggested by the "Evangelical Alliance" for the "Week of Prayer" and such is the interest that the lecture room is crowded every night.

The service tonight will begin at 7 o'clock so that those desiring to attend the lecture at the Christian church will have plenty of time at the close of the service. "Come thou with us and we will do thee good for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel."

BANK WITHDREW ITS PROPOSAL

A. B. Irvin Does Not Care to Handle The City's Finances

COUNCIL WAS HARMONIOUS

City Mayor Was Instructed to Borrow $3000 to Defray Expenses

The city council met in regular session Tuesday evening with all the members present and Mayor Cowing presiding.

The first petition coming before the council after the reading of the minutes, was a petition signed by residents in West Third street for a fire alarm box to be placed in West Third street, near or at the Big Four railroad crossing. The petition was referred to the committee of the fire department with power to act.

The financial secretary's report, which showed a total including balance of December 31st of $11,056.96; disbursements from various funds, $9,394.67, with a balance Jan. 1st of $1,662.29.

The disbursements for the month were as follows:

Salaries.....	$408.54
Fuel.....	546.20
Water works supplies.....	91.29
Electric light supplies.....	1,072.58
Fire department.....	100.85
Temporary loan.....	3,522.10

Total.....$5,736.56
The report was referred to the finance committee.

The matter of the Oneal ditch was left to the committee on streets, alleys and bridges. Mr. Reynolds moved that the same committee also use their judgment in regard to the ditch on South Jackson street.

On motion of Reynolds, carried by a unanimous vote, the mayor and city council were instructed to borrow $3000 today to defray the necessary expenses of the city.

A. B. Irvin, of the Farmers' Bank, withdrew his proposal and bond becoming a depository for the public funds of the city of Rushville, as he felt that it would not pay to look after the business.

As several new additions have been made with the fire limits, the city clerk was instructed to notify the parties owning such buildings that they must comply with the fire limit ordinance which requires a steel, tin, or rubberoid roofs.

THE WEATHER

Generally fair tonight and Thursday, except snow in north portion tonight. Slightly colder tonight.

TEVIS SAYS WE NEED A BATH

When we Apologetically
Brush a Little Dust off, it is Not Sufficient

CHOICE OF GOD OR BAAL

Exists Today as it Did Thousands of Years Ago—Three Classes of People

"There is no use going up to a sinner and saying 'excuse me' and end by brushing a little dust off him," said Dr. Tevis at the St. Paul's M. E. church revival service last night, "what he really needs is a bath—a spiritual bath. We must take off the mask and meet the situation face to face. This dealing with God is a business proposition, and there must not be any ifs or ands about it. No congregation ever held a revival drawing the line, and drawing it that it could be seen of all men."

Dr. Tevis took for his text last night a story of Elijah from the Book of Kings, and delivered a powerful sermon. The pastor declared that Elijah had to deal with three classes of people in that day and age, the same as exist now, namely, those who know-tow and bow in humble submission, a subject knee to Baal; those who worship God in an unassuming manner (who are to be congratulated to a certain degree) and those who hesitate, not knowing what to do, and winding up by doing nothing. The same question of whether we shall worship God or Baal exists today, as it has in all the ages, said the divine. "I wouldn't give a cent for these wishy-washy people with a conviction born of fear and one that will not stand the test of fire," said Dr. Tevis. "I have seen men come to what they thought was their deathbed," he continued, "and then they would send for the preacher and cry out to God for mercy and forgiveness—afraid to die. And these very same men on being restored to health, never did step their foot inside a church and ever did live in the fear of the Lord. Isn't it presumptions any way, to think that a boy who never opened his book in school is going to pass a brilliant examination. Some people cram holy resolutions down their throats and then think they are filled with religion."

Dr. Tevis is preaching sermons in the present revival which are striking the center, for in a fearless manner, he uses the plain, unvarnished truth, calling a spade a spade. The pastor is an excellent student and judge of human nature having fitted himself for the lecture platform by years of study and in the present meetings, makes good use of his observations as was evidenced, from the conversation held between two of his members as they walked home after one of the services this week. They were middle aged women, with families.

After walking over a block in silence, one suddenly turned to the other and said: "I think Dr. Tevis was hitting at me tonight. He struck me all over." "Well, I thought he surely meant me when he cited several instances."

DIVILBLISS CASE WAS POSTPONED

Center Township Man Charged
With Shooting at Ed Steele,
Awaits Trial

The case of State vs. Roy Divilbliss, which was slated for trial in the Decatur county circuit court Thursday, has been postponed.

Divilbliss is charged with shooting at Ed Steele near their homes in Center township following an altercation regarding the division of some chopped wood.

SHADE OF THE OLD APPLE TREE

And Other Horticultural Subjects Will be Discussed at Fruit Show

COMES AT OPPORTUNE TIME

Local Fruit Growers Will Attend the School at the Farmer's Short Course

The enterprise of the Indiana Horticultural Society in holding a Fruit Show at Purdue University at the time of the Farmer's Short Course, January 13-18, is attracting considerable attention among the up-to-date and progressive fruit growers of the State.

This show, which it is intended to make an annual affair is held at the invitation of the Horticultural Department of Purdue University. The premium list contains about 300 items and the cash prizes amount to over $300. The committee in charge of the show consists of W. C. Reed, the President of the State Horticultural Society, W. B. Elick, Secretary, and C. G. Woodbury of the Experiment Station.

This exhibition comes at an opportune time for the horticulturists, since the Short Course in Fruit Growing offered by the University, will enable them to get many valuable hints in regard to the care of orchards and control of insects by spraying.

MANY WILL HEAR NOTED LECTURER

Large Crowd Expected at the Main Street Christian Church
Tonight

Some lawyers are lecturers, and some lecturers are lawyers—some preachers are lecturers and some lecturers are preachers—but it remains for Francis B. Wendling of Chicago who will lecture tonight at the Christian church, to be the first artist who is a lecturer, and a lecturer who is an artist—at lecturing.

No man upon the American platform is more deserving of a wide hearing. His message is uplifting, helpful and abounds with the deepest sympathy for struggling humanity. He stands alone in his original, fascinating method and by his dramatic oratorical power, moves his listeners as with the wand of an enchanter to smiles and tears or to solemn, serious thought. He talks from brain and heart.

His quarter of a century's experience as a teacher and artist (both in practice and pursuit) has made him a close student of humanity, and his analysis of life, in its varied phases, and his observation of a phenomena of nature, coupled with a most wonderful gift of natural oratory, superb voice and magnetic personality, enable him to appear as one of the most charming, entertaining and brilliant speakers on the American platform. Everyone should hear "The Face Behind the Face" at the Main Street Christian church tonight.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS IN CIGARMAKERS UNION

The local cigarmakers' union No. 883, installed officers last night to serve the ensuing year as follows: President, Omer Collier; vice president, Peter Demmer; financial secretary, Robert J. Hudson; treasurer, Val Zangmeister; trustees Charles Applegate, Ed. Carter and Mike Coyne; seargent-at-arms, Henry Franks.

C. H. & D. BRAKEMAN'S ARM MAY BE SAVED AFTER ALL

It Was Necessary to Amputate
One of Sheldon's Legs
Monday

Cecil Selton, the C. H. & D. brakeman who was so fearfully injured in the yards at Connersville Sunday night, is getting along satisfactorily at the city hospital where he is being treated.

It was thought at first that it would be necessary to amputate Sheldon's right arm, following the amputation of his right foot, but it is believed now that it will not be necessary to remove the arm, although it may be that this operation will be required later.

SPIVEY WRITES LETTER

Saying the People of Indiana
Noted Conditions Here, People
Acted Wisely

Ad. V. Spivey who always wears the "badge of boost" for Rushville and Rush county as he travels over the State, and who is a close observer of conditions and men, writes the following timely letter, commending Rush county bankers and banks:

"Editor Rushville Republican:

Many times it has been my pleasure to ask the good people of Rush county to stop and enumerate the good things as well as the pleasant places in which their life work is being worked out. And now I wish to call attention to the splendid way in which the banks of Rushville and Rush county have cared for the people during the late flurry in finance, which I am glad to say is almost a thing of the past.

I have been, in the past eight weeks, during the financial flurry, where the storm was the hardest of any places in the State and Rush county and Rushville were in no wise annoyed. To the bankers, the acknowledged head of finance in every community, the people of Rushville and Rush county can well congratulate themselves that they had a set of men who stemmed the tide and carried them through with the least possible commotion. Being a firm believer in giving credit when credit is due, it is due the heads and officers of our different banks and our citizens should not be slow to approve or meagre in praise.

The people have acted with good common sense and with but one exception no business firm has acted with any but the best discretion. Tell them so and show your approval. You are all to be congratulated for our county has gained much favorable comment."

ORGANIZATION OF THE M. E. SUNDAY SCHOOL

The following organization of the Sunday school of St. Paul's M. E. church was effected Monday evening: Supt. E. B. Thomas; first assistant superintendent, Prof. J. H. Scholl; second assistant superintendent, Herbert Flint; secretary, Hugo Moffett; assistant secretary, Jesse Anderson; treasurer, Earl Payne; chorister, Dr. F. R. McOlanahan; assistant chorister, Orion Holmes; pianist, Mrs. A. L. Aldridge; assistant pianist, Lorene Smith; librarians, Frances Frazee and Dorothy Thomas.

RUSHVILLE IN FAST COMPANY

Our City Named in League by National Association of Base Ball Leagues

A SIX TEAM AFFAIR

Affiliation With Association
Would Have Tendency to Keep Interest Alive

Rushville has an opportunity to have a baseball team next season, under the supervision of the National Association of Baseball Leagues, which would insure a healthy condition throughout the season, for the best results in baseball can only be accomplished by a league. More interest can be aroused and maintained during an entire season.

Charles M. Raphun and R. W. May, members of the Madison, Indiana, Commercial club were in Shelbyville yesterday and of their visit the Shelbyville Democrat says in part:

"Madison desires a good baseball team and it well knows that a good team is impossible without a league of teams in towns of near the same size. With that knowledge firmly implanted, Madison sent a representative to the National Association of Baseball Leagues of America meeting, recently held in Chicago. The matter was there canvassed and Secretary Farrell, of the national association, selected six cities in the State of Indiana, to whom franchises would be given if the rules of the association would be complied with by each city."

"The cities selected are Shelbyville, Connersville, Rushville, Columbus, Greensburg and Madison. To comply with the rules of the national association, each club would have to bind itself to play out the season of from May the first to October the first, to agree to have a pay roll of not over $1100 a month and to incorporate a company with a capital stock of $2500. With these conditions in force, the Indiana League would have protection vouchsafed by the national association of leagues occupying larger cities."

If Rushville wants a high class of base ball, it can only be maintained throughout a season by the team being a member of a strong league affiliated with the national association of baseball leagues. In many cities, the merchants have found that a winning baseball team is a good advertisement for their town.

CHARGE OF ASSAULT AGAINST A WOMAN

Mary Montgomery and Louise
Snider Have a "Falling Out"
—Arrest Follows

The assault case, involving Mary Montgomery and Louise Snider, residents of the west part of the city, was postponed in Mayor Cowing's court yesterday and will be called later in the week.

The two women had a difference following the incarceration of Lige Pea recently, all of which is a very complicated affair, to say the least.

STATE VS. BARRETT CASE CALLED IN GREENSBURG

The case of State vs. Barrett, venued from the Rush circuit court to Decatur county, was called for trial in that court today. A number of witnesses went to Greensburg today to be in attendance.

WANT RESTORATION OF IN GOD WE TRUST

A Little Verbal Pyrotechnics in One Day's Congressional Stunt

Washington, Jan. 8.—The usual resolution referring the president's annual message to the several committees, furnished the occasion in the house for a number of addresses, mostly by members on the Democratic side. These were on a variety of subjects, but those that attracted especial attention were by Representative Shepard of Texas and Representative Willett of New York. The former not only made a plea for the restoration of the words "In God We Trust" on American coins, but discussed the cruise of the American battleship fleet and referred to a possible conflict with Japan.

Mr. Willett placed all the blame for the recent financial panic on President Roosevelt, whom he denounced in severe terms. He charged the president with not being a sensible man and with having turned on the gas and not the light, and with going up and down the country condemning and striking with the big stick the heads of great industrial institutions.

Republican policies were attacked by Hardwick of Georgia, who predicted that the only safety for the party lay in the nomination of Secretary Taft for the presidency.

The national banking laws were discussed by Mr. Morris of Nebraska, who urged as a protection to depositors the taxing of bank deposits with the view of securing a fund for that purpose. The resolution was pending when the house adjourned for the day.

Senator Aldrich has introduced his currency bill, which has been a subject for discussion among the members of the committee on finance for some days. He had the bill read to the senate and announced that the committee would be glad to consider in connection with it all bills that senators might desire to introduce. He assured Senator Culberson that his resolution would receive attention.

SUDDEN DEATH CAME TO LONERGAN

Prince of Bribe Traders Suddenly Stricken With Disease of the Heart

San Francisco, Jan. 8.—Thomas F. Loneragan, one of the supervisors under the Semitz administration and who confessed to the taking of bribes in the trolley franchise and the gas and telephone franchise, is dead at his home in this city from heart disease. He has been suffering from the affliction for several months, during which time he had been under the care of physicians. Until Loneragan was elected supervisor on the Union Labor ticket he drove a pie wagon for a local bakery. After his experience in politics where, according to his confession made to Detective Burns, he accepted many bribes, he returned to driving a pie wagon, having resigned his office after confessing. Most of the many thousands of dollars obtained by Loneragan while supervisor was lost, a part was burned in the fire of 1906, as he had it in greenbacks stored in the mattress of his bed. He was forty-nine years old and a native of Ireland. Loneragan was a witness for the prosecution in the Schmitz, Glass and Ford trials. He was one of the most important witnesses for the graft prosecution.

New Japanese Ambassador.
Tokio, Jan. 8.—While the selection of Baron Takahira, Japanese ambassador to Italy, to succeed Viscount Aoki at Washington, has not been officially announced, it is admitted at the foreign office that the appointment has been decided upon. It is understood that instructions have been forwarded to the Japanese charge d'affaires at Washington to announce to the state department the nomination of Baron Takahira.

Hoch Will Call Special Session.
Topeka, Kan., Jan. 8.—Governor Hoch announces that he will call an extra session of the legislature Jan. 16 to consider the enactment of currency, primary election and rate regulation measures.

Ambitious Project Failed.
Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 8.—Henry M. Endicott, Jr., of Boston, Mass., today bought at public auction for $70,000 the property of the North Jacksonville street railway and town improvement company, popularly known as the "Negro street railway." The sale was made to satisfy the judgment in a foreclosure of a mortgage in which W. D. Baarnett was trustee. This road was built here several years ago by negro capital and was the only line in the United States owned and operated by negroes.

GOBBLED HALF MILLION DOLLARS IS THE CHARGE AGAINST HEINZE

The Federal Government Takes a Hand In Copper Magnate's Affairs.

UNDER A SERIOUS CHARGE

Indictments Assert That F. Augustus
Heinze Over-Certified Checks
Aggregating $400,000.

An Echo of the Recent Crash of the Mercantile National Bank Heard
In Federal Court.

New York, Jan. 8.—Indicted by the federal grand jury for the over-certification of the fifteen checks representing in the aggregate over $400,000, and drawn by the firm of Otto Heinze & Co., on the Mercantile National Bank, F. Augustus Heinze, the copper magnate and former president of the Mercantile National bank, surrendered himself to United States Commissioner Shields and later was released on $50,000 bail. Heinze will be formally arraigned to plead to the indictment before Judge Chetfield in the United States circuit court.

Edward Lauterbach, counsel for Heinze, stated that his client did not wilfully over-certify the checks, as he had drawn a check to the credit of Otto Heinze & Co. to the amount of $500,000, which the bookkeeper of the bank possibly failed to enter on the books until a day after the certification of the checks in question. Mr. Lauterbach, continuing his explanation of Mr. Heinze's arrest, said his client supposed these certifications were properly entered in the books of the bank. He declared that it was merely a matter of bookkeeping which his client supposed had been properly attended to that day. It appears, however, Mr. Lauterbach continued, that some of the entries may have gone by until the next morning and that it was upon this that the indictments were based. Bail for Heinze was furnished by a surety company.

The indictment, which is a lengthy document, alleges that Heinze made the over-certifications in his capacity as president of the Mercantile National bank. The various counts of the indictment give the several checks alleged to have been over-certified, amounting in all to $400,000.

The indictment was found under Section 5028 of the revised statutes of the United States, which says that an official of a bank found guilty of such action is liable to not less than five nor more than ten years' imprisonment.

Heinze, who has had a remarkable career as a mining engineer and promoter of various mining camps, especially those developing copper properties, and within the last year or two as a financier, was president of the Mercantile National bank until October last. At that time there were heavy withdrawals from the bank, due to a rapid decline in the stocks of the United Copper company, in which Heinze was heavily interested. Heinze resigned from the presidency of the bank. Charles W. Morse, the shipping promoter, who had been associated with Heinze in various enterprises, retired from the active management of several banks which he controlled, and it was the great unrest precipitated by these changes that brought about a culmination of the city's financial troubles generally and the panic which was in full sway in the latter days of October. It has been reported ever since Heinze's retirement from the Mercantile that the federal government was making a rigid investigation of the affairs of the bank and others with a view to the prosecution of the persons responsible for any unlawful act that might be discovered.

Will Appeal to President.
Helfa, Mont., Jan. 8.—Counsel for F. Augustus Heinze has asked for a stay of sixty days in the collection of the $20,000 fine imposed upon Heinze by the federal court for contempt. Heinze asked for the stay in order that he may appeal to President Roosevelt to remit the fine. He will also ask for a remission of fines of $1,000 each imposed on two of his superintendents.

The Chicago wheat market was weak because of profit-taking induced by declines at the principal European grain centers.

Hickory Trees That Bear Pecans.
Dr. Dennis of Cedar Rapids, Ia., a prominent member of the Iowa Park and Forestry association, which held its annual meeting in the state horticultural rooms at the state capitol, has a unique scheme to grow southern nuts on Iowa trees, says a Des Moines correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. As a sort of a Burbank of Iowa, he has carried out experiments and discovered that by grafting pecan shoots on the branches of common shellbark hickory trees a fine grade of southern nuts can be produced. He has succeeded in growing chestnuts of a fine grade and also has managed to produce a fine sample of English walnut off the graftings on northern nut producing trees.

ORDER OF HIBERNIANS

Is the Center Around Which There
Promises to Break a Storm Which Will Convulse Catholic Church.

Father McDermott's Report on the Matter, He Says, Was Suppressed
by Archbishop.

Philadelphia, Jan. 8.—Members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians have been stirred through the refusal of the Rev. D. I. McDermott, rector of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, to permit funeral services to be held in his church over the remains of John Daly, a parishioner, because a Hibernian lodge had been invited to attend the obsequies. The funeral was to have been held yesterday, but had to be postponed. Father McDermott said he would permit the funeral to take place from St. Mary's only on condition that the invitation to the Hibernians be revoked. The widow of Daly agreed and in the funeral notice printed this morning it was stated that "the invitation to the Ancient Order of Hibernians to attend the funeral is hereby revoked." The funeral was then held from the church without the presence of the Hibernians.

Father McDermott, in explanation of his opposition to the society, said: "My absolute opposition to the Ancient Order of Hibernians is based on my knowledge and the facts in my possession about the Molly Maguires, which I got directly from the condemned Molly Maguires themselves. No power on earth will ever make me recede one inch from my stand against the Hibernians. I have given my testimony against them and what I said was true and is true, and I cannot compromise on it."

In further explaining his attitude, Father McDermott said: "I have on my desk a memorandum which I was directed to prepare presenting the facts in my possession to be read before the third plenary council in Baltimore. After I had prepared the document, under the direction of Dr. Corcoran, I was called before Archbishop Ryan here and asked to read it to him. He declared that it contained features that would cause one of the greatest scandals the Catholic church has ever known, and informed me he would use his influence against having it submitted before the council. I sent the memorial to Dr. Corcoran, regardless of Archbishop Ryan's opposition, but through the influence of Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Ryan, during the sessions of the council in Baltimore, the memorial never reached them."

"Archbishop Ryan and a number of other prominent clergymen are aware that the facts I have in my possession against the Ancient Order of Hibernians are true and if made known they will cause the greatest kind of a scandal, and I have a mind to give them to the public."

When Archbishop Ryan's attention was called to Father McDermott's statement, he replied that he did not care to discuss the matter in any way.

WIFE MURDERER SUICIDES BY PISTOL ROUTE

Carbondale, Ill., Jan. 8.—The dead bodies of Clarence Snyder and his wife were found in the bedroom of their home here. The woman was shot through the heart, and the man through the heart and right temple. The general belief is that Snyder killed his wife and committed suicide. Snyder was employed in the bridge department of the Illinois Central. It is known they quarreled and had decided to break up housekeeping.

TRAIN CRASHED THROUGH TRESTLE

Three Killed and Many Injured
When Excursion Train Went Down

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 8.—The second section of what is known as the Collier special, running from Cleveland, O., to St. Augustine, Fla., was wrecked yesterday afternoon between Dallas and Hiram, Ga., on the Southern railroad, on a trestle twenty-five feet over the nearly dry bed of what is known as Copper Mine creek. Five of the seven cars went into the mud, and as a result a score or more passengers, most of them residents of Ohio, were injured, three seriously.

The only fatally hurt were Engineer Edwards, who was caught beneath the cab of his engine when it overturned after clearing the trestle, and Road Foreman of Engines Snapp, and the negro fireman, who died in the hospital here. The injuries to the passengers consist chiefly of broken limbs and bruises.

The Collier special is an annual excursion run from Cleveland, O., to Florida points and Cuba, under the direction of General Passenger Agent Collier of the Big Four system. The train was late at Dallas and it was well along toward 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the second section slowed down for the trestle crossing Copper Mine creek. On the south side of this trestle is a curve. The engine passed the bridge in safety, then left the rails and turned on its side. The baggage car turned over on the bank, the five heavy Pullmans following, crashing through the trestle and falling to the bed of the creek. The last car, an observation coach, rested with one end in the mud and the other on the bank above. One car in the middle of the train cracked in the middle through the strain. On board the train were some 200 excursionists. That they escaped without fatal injury is considered remarkable. Most of those on the train went to Atlanta hotels and had their injuries cared for by physicians.

Obituary.

Gash Rose was born near Holten, Ind., June 20th, 1870 and departed this life December 30, 1907, at his home on North Morgan street, aged 37 years 6 months and 10 days.

He was united in marriage to Lenora Williams, June 7, 1890; to this union were born two children, a son and daughter, who with the mother, two sisters and three brothers still survive.

At an early age became a member of the M. E. church at Osgood, Ind., and remained a member until called to his last reward.

He was a noble type of manhood, generous and kind to a fault, was loved and respected by all who knew him and we can but say that a good man has passed to the Great Beyond.

His kind acts will long be remembered and remain a living monument to one who has passed away.

We will say to his wife and children "you have lost a good husband and father. Live to meet him on the sweet, sunny banks of everlasting life, for we believe that in the morning of the resurrection of the just that his father will come forth clothed in glory, honor and immortality."

Petitioner Lost Votes.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—The result of a recount of votes cast a year ago last November for Thomas Lantry and Ferdinand L. Barnett (colored) candidates for the municipal court bench, announced late yesterday afternoon, showed a gain of 267 votes for Judge Lantry. Barnett's loss was 243 votes. The recount was made on a petition by Barnett, who charged fraud and error in the original count.

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS.

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Rushville Citizen Shows How to Cure Them.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary troubles sets in they think it will soon correct itself. So it is with all other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Rushville people testify to permanent cures.

L. B. Downey, 703 N. Sexton Street, Rushville, Ind., says:

"Doan's Kidney Pills are all right and I can strongly recommend them for lumbago. I had a terrible lameness in my back that prevented me from turning in bed or rising from a chair quick. My kidneys were also weak and a disordered condition of the kidney secretions existed. When I learned how positive Doan's Kidney Pills were in curing such difficulties, I got a box of remedy at F. B. Johnson & Company's drug store. They soon banished the pains and lameness in my back and strengthened my kidneys. I am not troubled any more with an aching in the top of my head. I know Doan's Kidney Pills to be a reliable remedy for such troubles."

SENSATION IN MERIDA, MEXICO

Bank of Yucatan Looted to the Tune of Nearly a Million

Mexico City, Jan. 8.—Seven hundred and forty thousand dollars is missing from the Bank of Yucatan, according to reports received here today from Merida. Following the disappearance of this enormous amount, Fernando U. Rodriguez, sub-director, and Mateo Ponce, ex-cashier of the bank, with ten other persons, have been arrested.

All of the money missing is said to have been new bank-notes and were taken from a strong safe to which there were two keys, one in the possession of the sub-director and the other in the possession of the cashier. Later reports from Merida state that Lawyer P. G. Ponce and Eduardo Ponce, son-in-law and son respectively of the cashier, have also been placed under arrest. In all there have been twelve prominent persons connected with the bank who have been placed under arrest, all of whom are among the best-known and most prominent people of Merida.

Three Jurors Accepted.

New York, Jan. 8.—When the Thaw trial adjourned for the day at 10:50 last night, three sworn and four provisional jurors were in the box. The three who thus form the nucleus of the trial panel are: Charles E. Gremmels, ship broker, who is to be foreman; Arthur R. Naething, banker and caterer, and George W. Cary, drygoods dealer. Following the administering of the oath to these three men, counsel announced that the jury-box would again be filled before any more peremptory challenges were exercised.

A Poor Prophet.

Conan Doyle told of an experience which he had when leaving school. His teacher must have been one of those noble old Romans such as Thackeray describes as roaring at young Pemmils when the major, his uncle, called to take the boy away. When Conan Doyle had finished his course in school the head master called him aside and, after eying him with ominous disfavor, spoke to him in measured tones as follows: "Doyle, I have known you now for seven years, and I know you thoroughly. I am going to say something which you will remember in after life. Doyle, you will never come to any good!"—Bookman.

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, JANUARY 8, 1908

The foreign trade of the United States runs up to three billions, with a balance of $450,000,000 in our favor. Prosperity is still with us.

They come high, but the American heiresses must have them. The titled husband of the Countess of Yarmouth cost her over a million dollars. But she is satisfied since this is considered a ridiculously high price.

The panic is surely a thing of the past. Mr. Rockefeller has made another big contribution to the University of Chicago, and Mr. Morgan has bought another fine collection of paintings.

A great deal has been said and written about the bad boy or the wayward girl. But really it is not altogether their fault. It is the parents that need training. Did you ever think that this might be the key to the whole situation? If your boy is wild, who did it? Who permitted it? If his chums or friends are bad, who allowed him to make those friends? If his ambitions are lacking, who failed to hold the best ideals before him? The training of children is a big question, but there is also the training of parents—some of them need it badly.

The Republicans of Rush county are again urged to attend and take a vital interest in the preliminary organization of the party. Nothing will do more for the success of the ticket in November than the selection of men for county committeemen who have proved themselves loyal, energetic and faithful. The Republicans in Rush county can always roll up a handsome and safe majority when they get the vote out. Getting out the vote is largely a matter of proper selection of committeemen. Proper selection of committeemen must be made at this time. Due notice of the time of the meetings in the various townships has been given in the Republican. All the townships except Washington and Union will have their meeting on Saturday of this week, while those two townships have announced their meeting for Friday, the 10th.

This paper again urges the Republicans throughout the county to attend these meetings.

tional committee. Mr. Taggart is bearing the brunt of the opposition. Jackson, however, is proving a good lieutenant. His clean party record is in his favor and even his opponents are admitting that he will make a good chairman.

Samuel Ralston of Lebanon has formally entered the race for the Democratic nomination for governor. He was at the Grand hotel, meeting the Democratic leaders as rapidly as they arrived. He told them that he has become a candidate and that he will make a strong fight for the place. Ralston has the indorsement of the Ninth district and is generally regarded as a formidable candidate. Senator L. Ert Slack of Franklin, Rev. Thomas Kuhns of Richmond, Carroll McCullough of Anderson, and other candidates for governor, are also here.

The Grand hotel lobby is alive with Risk supporters today. A special car brought Mayor Durgan, Lew Schafer, James W. Schooler and many others from Lafayette, Risk's home. They are leaving no stone unturned to obtain the chairmanship for him. Henry Warrum, ex-Mayor John W. Holtzman and other strong anti-organization men here, have rallied about Risk and are pulling every wire they can reach. They are still hopeful of success, although it was generally admitted today that the odds are against them.

Clyde H. Jones, a Crawfordsville lawyer, has announced himself as a candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination in the Ninth district. Mr. Jones made the race against Landis four years ago. He is the third Crawfordsville attorney to announce himself, the other two being Emerson E. Ballard and Marion E. Clodfelter, who made the race two years ago.

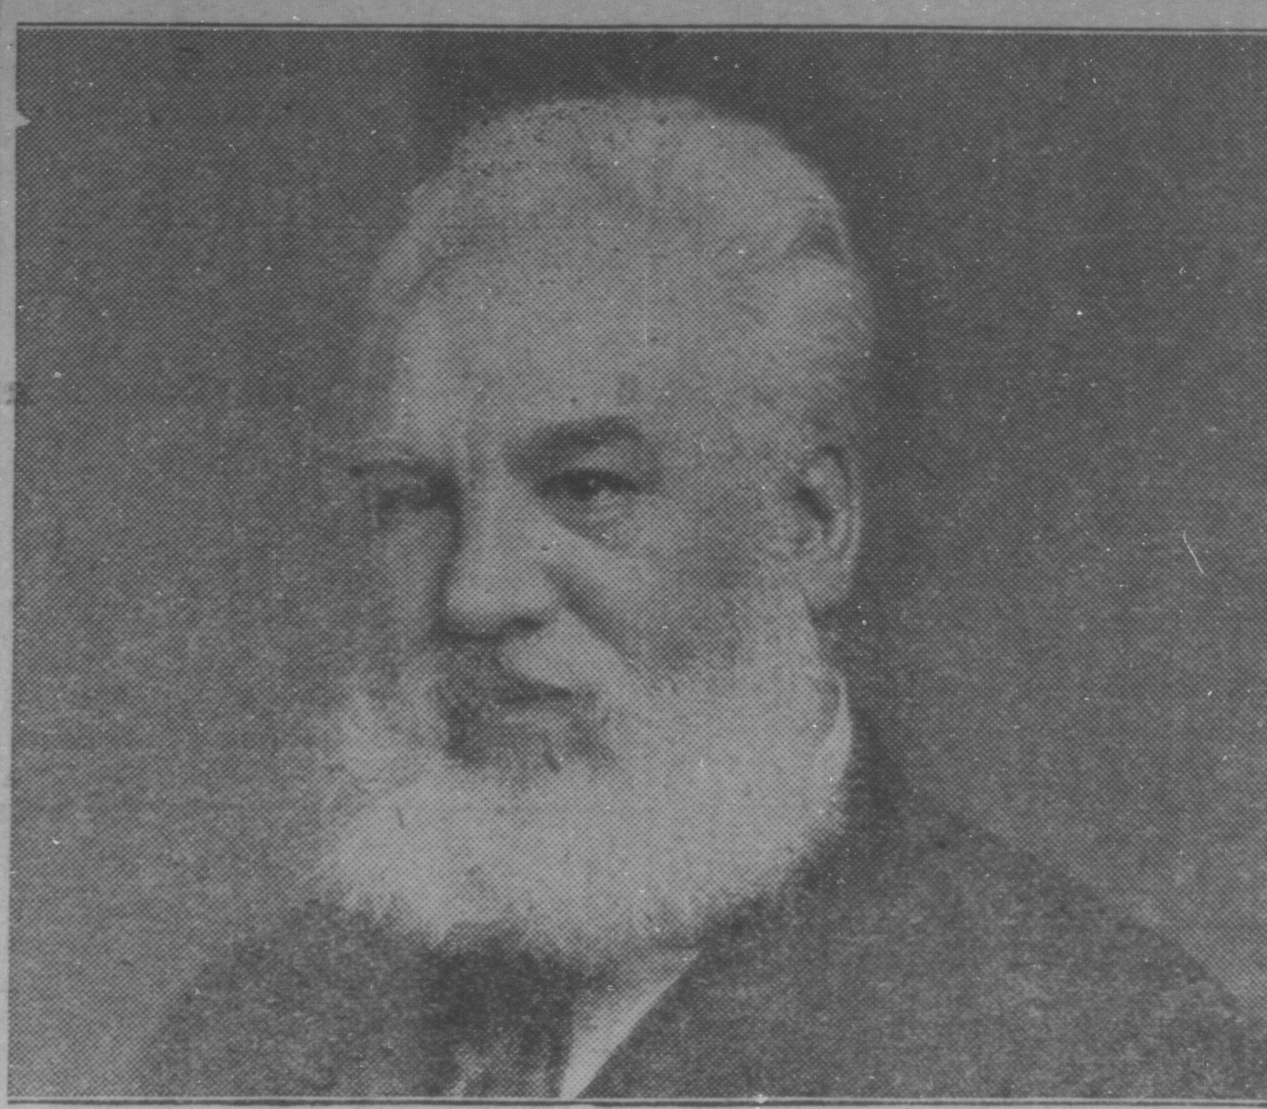

Revolution in America which will make the French revolution look like a tempest in a teapot, the confiscation of great wealth and estates wrongfully acquired and general chaos as a result of abnormal and unsound speculation were recently predicted at Chicago by Dr. J. F. Crowell, once associate editor of the Wall Street Journal and chairman of the social and economic section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, says a Chicago dispatch to the New York Sun.

After considering the field of legitimate speculation, which, he said, did not include the domain of manufactures, agriculture, transportation and banking, Mr. Crowell said:

"The encroachment of the speculative spirit upon these industrial and commercial fields spells danger. The leaders of great enterprises today probably do not adequately appreciate the smoldering fury of the discontent which their own management of business has steadily engendered in the hearts of a thinking populace.

"There are dangers in this direction which the hogishness of corporate greed has done more than anything else to bring to a crisis in American society.

"The statement attributed to R. T. Crane to the effect that conditions in the United States parallel those before the French revolution is true, with this difference—that the French revolution was a tempest in a teapot compared with what might happen here in America."

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL The Inventor of the Telephone

Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, comes from a family that has made a special study of sound and speech for three generations. His grandfather, Alexander Bell, invented a method for removing impediments of speech; his father, Alexander Melville Bell, was the inventor of "visible speech," a system to teach deaf-mutes to speak; and the third of the Alexanders, really "Alexander the Great" of his family, taught a piece of wire to carry the human voice many miles and deliver the message without a change.

He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1847, and after receiving his education at the High School and the University of his native town, went to London at the age of twenty to attend the University, but left on account of ill health, and in 1870 came to Canada with his father. Two years later he went to Boston, where he introduced his father's system of teaching the deaf, and supported himself by private classes. But the broader field of science attracted him most; in England and Canada he had carried on experiments in multiplex telegraphy which grew more fascinating as he proceeded, and in Boston he interested two wealthy men who supplied funds for his experiments; but he had to teach by day for his own support.

In 1874 came the first faint elusive germ of the telephone; it seemed such a will-o'-the-wisp to his partners that they would not listen to it; they were practical men with no time for such dreams. In 1875, after completing his multiplex telegraphy, he went to Washington and found his application for a patent had been contested by Elisha Gray, the great scientist. He was in despair, but while talking to Professor Henry, he mentioned his theory of sending sound by telegraph, and the few kindly words of encouragement he received, breathed into him new life and purpose.

He returned to Boston with a giant's energy but an almost empty purse. To complicate the situation he had fallen in love with Miss Hubbard, daughter of his friend and benefactor, and had a feeling of delicacy about asking the father of his fiancée for a loan. So in desperation he renewed the struggle, and in June, 1875, almost by accident, stumbled on a clew that solved the problem. On February 14th, 1876, he filed his application for a patent; one hour later Elisha Gray filed a caveat on precisely the same plan, and on March 7th, 1876, Mr. Bell received his patent; it was number 174,465, one of the most important ever allowed in the history of America.

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT.

The Most Brilliant Illumination Is Not Always the Best.

A writer in an engineering magazine offers some disconcerting information on the subject of illumination, disconcerting because the reader will probably find that he has been, innocently enough, following a course of procedure there described as injurious. For instance, in the case of eye-strain he may have felt that even the dim light by which he worked was too strong, and so turned down the light, thus increasing the difficulty, or, what is more likely to be the case, when the strain has been caused by too brilliant illumination he fancies that what is needed is stronger light and so increases it.

Overstrain from too bright a light is said to manifest itself by an itching sensation in the eyeballs, with the tendency to rub the eyes for relief. The proper course, then, is to see that the light is more perfectly diffused or softened and that it falls in the right direction. After these precautions have been taken it is worth while to try a smaller quantity of light, this trial to continue long enough in time for the eyes to become fully adjusted to the change. The value of illumination is not to be judged by the apparent brightness of the lights when looked at directly—the brighter the light the better—but by the effect on the object to be looked at, and the most desirable effect, so far as the eyes are concerned, is not always produced by the most brilliant lights.—Indianapolis Star.

Avoid multiplicity of business. The man of one thing is the man of success.—Edwards.

INSULTS TO ROYALTY.

Some of the Things That Constitute Leze Majesty In England.

Many people think that leze majesty—giving insult to royalty—is not a crime in Great Britain. The English statute books, however, contain many penalties for such offenses.

Placing a postage stamp on a letter upside down is a punishable offense, as is also the defacement of a coin bearing the royal image. This is insulting the king's edify.

Private individuals may not raise the royal standard over their dwellings. This is the emblem of the regal authority to be displayed only where the king is present.

While an agitator may talk against royalty in the abstract as much as he chooses, contemptuous or insulting personal references to the reigning sovereign opens the offender to a heavy fine and imprisonment.

The slightest slap upon the face of the king or queen—or any other part of the anatomy, for that matter—is punishable with the death penalty. In the reign of Queen Victoria a Lieutenant Page struck her across the face with his cane. He was sentenced to death, but the queen commuted his sentence.

It is likewise a crime to bring the uniform of the sovereign into contempt. To garb a low comedian or a villain of the stage in a discarded uniform of the army or the navy is sufficient to bring heavy censure from the government. For this reason theatrical managers usually see to it that the uniforms worn are not exactly copies of the real things.

Try a WANT-AD for Results

Present Tightness of Money Will Soon Pass.

By Lord AVEBURY (Sir John Lubbock), Famous English Banker.

PANIC, which has led to WIDESPREAD HOARDING, is no doubt one of the greatest causes of the financial condition of America, but this is, of course, not due to a single or a simple cause. Matters in the world of finance, as in other worlds, are complex, interdependent and interwoven. The very PROSPERITY of America is one of the causes of the present pressure for money.

The panic seems to us in London to be UNREASONABLE. We have confidence in the great American financial institutions. PANICS RARELY LAST LONG, AND AMERICAN INVESTORS HAVE NOW A GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

The commerce of America is SOUND AND PROSPEROUS. It is true that the internal trade of the United States is now suffering from a scarcity of small change, as in 1893. American trade has grown enormously, and the nation is expanded and is expanding so fast that the EXISTING LAW IS UNSUITABLE to the present conditions. There is abundance of wealth in the country, both natural wealth, as yet undeveloped, and acquired and accumulative wealth.

I HAVE MYSELF NO FEARS AS TO A SATISFACTORY AND, I HOPE, A SPEEDY SETTLEMENT OF ITS TROUBLES. WHEN THOSE WHO ARE NOW HOARDING CURRENCY AND SPECIE REALIZE THAT THEIR FEARS ARE UNREASONABLE THEY WILL BRING OUT THEIR HOARDS, AND WE SHALL HAVE MONEY VERY EASY AGAIN.

IN SEARCH OF OLD CIVIL WAR VETERAN

Commander Kinney of the Local G. A. R. Receives Inquires From Iowa

D. M. Kinney, commander of the local G. A. R. post is in receipt of a letter from a John R. Clark, of Albia, Iowa, who is seeking information concerning the whereabouts of James Bradbury, an old veteran of the civil war.

The letter states that Bradbury enlisted with several others from Rush county in Company E., of the 9th, Indiana cavalry 121st regiment in December, 1863. The company was made up mostly of Rush county boys.

The letter shows a very anxious disposition to hear from Bradbury, and further states that if he could not be found, or any member of his family, it would be a great favor to the writer to learn the names and addresses of some old settlers in this county who might give him some information.

The writer did not state his reasons for wanting to obtain the whereabouts of the old veteran.

Homer Cole has gone to Fayette, Ohio, where he will conduct the song services in a series of revival meetings at that place.

A Wild Metaphor.

The mixed metaphor has for years been considered what is technically known as a peach, but long ago an embryo Henry Clay, a contestant for oratorical honors in the University of Michigan, sprung one so much more rapid in the metaphor race than its rivals that it may be said to win in a walk. Rising up on his tiptoes and swelling out his chest like a pouter pigeon, the young orator exclaimed as though he would his words might go a-thundering down the ages, "The star of empire, tripping with light footsteps across the Atlantic, poises on her outspread pinions in the air and then pitches—and let us hope it may be forever—her tent above the dome of the capitol at Washington."

Here's Where the Fun Comes In

Little wonder Jesse Poe wore a sour looking face this morning as he went to work. He not only was "given the sack" last night, but he had lemons handed to him in bunches. Yesterday afternoon he ordered a dozen eggs by phone at a local grocery, and when he was going home to his evening meal, rushed into the store, and in his hurry and excitement picked up a sack which on reaching home, he found to contain a dozen lemons. Result—an eggless supper.

After supper he returned the lemons and exchanged them at the grocery for his sack of eggs, taking the eggs to his store, that there could not be a mistake again. Going home late last night, he carefully carried the sack of eggs, thinking that inasmuch as he had been "fished" once, it would be his ill luck to fall and break the second package. Fortunately he reached home in safety, and before going to sleep apprised his wife that he had taken extra precaution to see that they would have eggs for breakfast. This morning the sack of eggs was brought forth. Ye gods! The sack did not contain eggs at all, but a dozen, dried-up, hard lemons.

Jesse no longer speaks to the "other" fellows who work around the music store, and who saw him put away the eggs in his store, after he made the exchange last night at the grocery.

This day had a few of the earmarks of January, alright, alright.

The natures of all born in equal station are not so widely varied as to present extremes of vice and goodness but by the effects of rarest and severest experience. Beautiful fables and terrible gnomes do not stand by each infant's cradle sowing the nascent mind with tenderest graces or vilest errors. The slow attrition of vicious associations and law defying indulgences or the sudden impetus of some terribly multiplied and social disaster must have worn away the susceptibility of conscience and self respect or dashed the mind from the height of these down to the depths of despair and recklessness before one of ordinary life could take counsel with violence and crime.—Frederick A. Aiken.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Ind., January 8.—At the annual meeting of the state board of agriculture, held here, John C. Haines of Rockport, Mason J. Niblack of Vincennes, E. S. Tuell of Corydon, Newton Brown of Franklin, David Wallace of Indianapolis, Clem Graves of Bunker Hill, C. B. Benjamin of Crown Point, and James E. McDonald of Ligonier were re-elected as members. President Conger, Secretary Downing and Treasurer Lagrange presented their annual reports. Conger said the last year was the best in the history of the board. The total expenditure for the year for permanent improvements was $119,869. The receipts at the gate last year were $63,348.50, an increase of nearly $8,000 over 1905. Conger recommended several important permanent improvements, among them the erection of a great machinery building to cover five acres of ground. He said that if the progress made during the next few years is as great as during 1907, the state fair will expand wonderfully. The reports of Secretary Downing and Treasurer Lagrange showed that the board is in good shape financially.

The Democratic state committee met here today to elect a new chairman. It seemed that the only man who had a chance of beating Stokes Jackson is Gilbert Hendren, it being thought that if it should develop that Jackson could not land seven votes without the support of the Second district, Padgett, chairman of the latter, might force a vote for Hendren rather than lose to the anti-organization element. The possibility, however, of Hendren's election was considered remote. Adam Heimberger of New Albany said that his name would be presented. He had hopes, but only one vote. Risk, who is the champion of the anti-organization movement, seemed destined to almost complete rout. If there shall be two ballots it was thought that he might not receive more than one vote on the second, unless an unexpected combination is made in his behalf. He proposes to go through to the finish. His friends were claiming Hoffman, Emswiler, Stevens and Foley of the Ninth, sure. They are hopeful of Seales, of the First. It was not believed, however, that they have won over any of Jackson's votes. Jackson said that he expected to win. On the wind-up he probably will have Seales, Padgett, Storen, Pleasants, Foley of the Fifth, Osborn, Korbly, Ellingham and Foley of the Ninth, with equal chances of getting Emswiler and Hoffman. Close observers declared this morning that the chances are ten to one in favor of the election of Jackson. The entire strength of the leadership of the anti-organization forces has been brought into play, however, in hopes of beating him. National Chairman Taggart has been on the scene of battle for the past twenty-four hours, watching every movement with eagle eye. The stakes he is playing for mean as much to him as his race for the national chairmanship three years ago, as defeat of his organization now would be held to mean his relegation as a party leader in his own state, and would probably end his hopes of being re-elected to a place on the na-

AMUSEMENTS

She was standing beside the fire with Quarrier, one foot on the fender, apparently too preoccupied to notice him. So he strolled into the gunroom, which was blue with tobacco smoke and aromatic with the volatile odors from de-anters.

There were a few women there, and the majority of the men, Lord Alderdene, Major Belwether and Mortimer, were at a table by themselves. Stacks of ivory chips and five cards spread in the center of the green explained the nature of their game, and Mortimer, raising his heavy inflamed eyes and seeing Siward unoccupied, said whee- zily: "Cut out that 'widow' and give Siward his stack! Anything above two pairs for a jack triples the ante. Come on, Siward, there's a decent chap!"

So he seated himself for a sacrifice to the blind goddess balanced upon her winged wheel, and the cards ran high—so high that stacks dwindled or toppled within the half hour, and Mortimer grew redder and redder, and Major Belwether blander and blander, and Alderdene's face wore a continual nervous snicker, showing every white hound's tooth, and the ice in the tall glasses clinked ceaselessly.

It was late when Quarrier "sat in," with an expressionless acknowledgment of Siward's presence and an emotionless raid upon his neighbor's resources with the first hand dealt, in which he participated without drawing a card.

And always Siward, eyes on his cards, seemed to see Quarrier before him, his overmanicured fingers caressing his silky beard, the symmetrical pompadour dark and thick as the winter fur on a rat, tufting his smooth blank forehead.

It was very late when Siward first began to be aware of his increasing deafness, the difficulty, too, that he had in making people hear, the annoying contempt in Quarrier's woman-like eyes. He felt that he was making a fool of himself, very noiselessly somehow, but with more racket than he expected when he miscalculated the distance between his hand and a de- canter.

It was time for him to go unless he chose to ask Quarrier for an explanation of that sneer which he found dis- tasteful. But there was too much noise, too much laughter.

Besides, he had a matter to attend to—the careful perusal of his mother's letter to Mrs. Ferrall.

Very white, he rose. After an in- definite interval he found himself entering his room.

The letter was in the dresser. Several things seemed to fall and break, but he got the letter, sank down on the bed's edge and strove to read—set his teeth grimly, forcing his blurred eyes to a focus. But he could make nothing of it, nor of his toilet either, nor of Ferrall, who came in on his way to bed, having noticed the electricity still in full glare over the open transom, and who straightened out matters for the stunned man lying face downward across the bed, his mother's letter crushed in his nerveless hand.

CHAPTER FOUR

BREAKFAST at Shotover, except for the luxurious sluggards to whom trays were sent, was served in the English fashion, any other method or compromise being impossible.

Ferrall appeared to be a normal man, energetically devoted to his business, his pleasures, his friends and comfortably in love with his wife. And if some considered his vigor in business to be lacking in mercy, that vigor was always exercised within the law. He never transgressed the rules of war, but his headlong energy some- times landed him close to the dead line. He had already breakfasted when the earliest risers entered the morning room to saunter about the sideboards and investigate the simmering contents of silver covered dishes on the warm- ers.

The fragrance of coffee was pleas- antly perceptible. Men in conventional shooting attire roamed about the room, selected what they cared for and car- ried it to the table. Mrs. Mortimer was there consuming peaches that matched her complexion. Marion Page, always more congruous in field costume and belted jacket than in anything else, and always, like her own hunters, minutely groomed, was preparing a breakfast for her own consumption with the leisurely pre- cision characteristic of her whether in the saddle, on the box or grassing her brace of any covey that ever flushed.

Captain Voucher and Lord Alderdene discussed prospects between bites, at- tentive to the monosyllabic opinions of Miss Page. Her twin brothers, Gor- don and Willis, shyly consuming oat- meal, listened respectfully and waited on their sister at the slightest lifting of her thinly arched eyebrows.

Into this company sauntered Siward apparently no worse for wear, for as yet the enemy had set upon him no proprietary insignia save a rather be- coming pallor and faint bluish shad- ows under the eyes. He strolled about, exchanging amiable greetings, and presently selected a chilled grape fruit as his breakfast. Opposite him Mort- imer, breakfasting upon his own dread- ful bracer of an apple soaked in port, raised his heavy inflamed eyes with a significant leer at the iced grape fruit.

Siward glanced out through the lead- ed casements into the brilliant Sep- tember sunshine.

Outside he could see Major Belweth- er, pink skinned, snowy chop whiskers brushed rabbit fashion, very voluble with Sylvia Landis, who listened ab- sently, head partly averted. Quarrier in tweeds and gaiters, his morning ci- gar delicately balanced in his gloved fingers, strolled near enough to be within earshot, and when Sylvia's in- attention to Major Belwether's obser- vations became marked to the verge of rudeness he came forward and spoke. But whatever it was that he said appeared to change her passive inattention to quiet displeasure, for, as Siward rose from the table, he saw her turn on her heel and walk slowly toward a group of dogs presided over by some kennel men and gamekeepers.

She was talking to the head game- keeper when he emerged from the house, but she saw him on the terrace and gave him a bright nod of greeting, so close to an in- vitation that he descended the stone steps and crossed the dew wet lawn.

"I am asking Dawson to explain just exactly what a 'Shot- over drive' resem- bles," she said, turning to include Siward in an animated conference with the big, scraggy head keeper.

NEWS OF INDIANA

BAGGED BY INSPECTORS
Frank Lease, Postoffice Cler., Caught by a Decoy Letter.

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 8.—A sen- sation was caused here by the arrest of Frank Lease, a clerk in the Bloom- ington postoffice, charged with stealing letters containing money. Inspectors Moore of New Albany and S. A. Su- song of Louisville, placed a decoy letter in the north-bound Monon mail, which went directly into the hands of Lease at the postoffice, and when he could not produce it he finally con- fessed that he had been taking letters and money since last September. The marked money was found at his home. A number of such cases have been reported, and an investigation was started. Lease is twenty-three years old, married, and has one child. He has been employed in the office for two years.

Pickpockets Invade Church.

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 8.—While kneeling in St. Joseph's Catholic church during mass, two women pick- ed the pocket of Miss Margaret Joyce, sister of former Councilman Patrick Joyce, a well-known merchant. Miss Joyce caught the women in the act, and all three started on a run out of the church, and continued for a mile, when Miss Joyce's strength failed her and she abandoned the chase. A fine purse, some jewels and $25 cash are missing.

The Deadly Live Wire.

Marion, Ind., Jan. 8.—Kemper Pat- erson, twenty-four years old, a line- man in the employ of the United Tel- ephone company, was shocked to death while engaged in putting in a telephone at the bakery of Otto May- er. Patterson was standing on the ground and holding a telephone wire which came in contact with a high ten- sion wire in the alley at the rear of Mayer's bakery, and about 2,000 volts of electricity passed through his body.

The long overdue ship Mount Royal has reported at Queenstown with all well on board. The vessel had been compelled to put back on account of heavy storms.

custom peculiar to Shotover House to open the season with what is called a Shotover drive?"

"I heard Alderdene talking about it," he said, smilingly inspecting the girl's attire of khaki, with its buttoned pockets, gun pads and Cossack cartridge loops, and the tan knee kilts hanging heavily plaited over gaiters and little thick soled shoes. He had never cared very much to see women afield, for, in a rare case where there was no affec- tation, there was something else in- born that he found unpleasant—some- thing lacking about a woman who could take life from frightened wild things, something shocking that a woman could look, unmoved, upon a twitching, blood soiled heap of feath- ers at her feet.

Meanwhile Dawson, dog whip at salute, stood knee deep among his rest- less setters explaining the ceremony with which Mr. Ferrall ushered in the opening of each shooting season.

"It's our own idea, Miss Landis," he said proudly. "One's a season Mr. Fer- rall and his guests likes it for a mixed bag. 'Tis a sort of picnic, miss. The guns is in pairs, sixty yards apart in line, an' the rules is walk straight ahead, dogs to heel until first cover is reached; fire straight or to quarter, never blankin' nor wipin' no eyes, and ground game counts as feathers for the Shotover cup."

"Oh! It's a skirmish line that walks straight ahead?" said Siward, nodding.

"Straight ahead, sir. No stoppin', no turnin' for hedges, fences, water or rock. There is boats for deep water and fords marked and corduroy for to pass the Seven Dreens. Luncheon at 1, miss, an hour's rest, then straight on over hill, valley, rock and river to the rodywood atop Osprey ledge. You'll see the poles and the big nests, sir. It's there they score for the cup and there when the bag is counted the traps are ready to carry you home again." And to Siward: "Will you draw for your lady, sir? It is the cus- tom."

"Are you my 'lady'?" he asked, turning to Sylvia.

"Do you want me?"
In the smiling luster of her eyes the faintest spark flashed out at him, a hint at defiance for somebody, perhaps for Major Belwether, who had taken considerable pains to enlighten her as to Siward's condition the night be- fore; perhaps also for Quarrier, who had naturally expected to act as her gun bearer in emergencies.

"I'm probably a poor shot," she said, looking smilingly straight into Si- ward's eyes. "But if you'll take me"— "I will with pleasure," he said. "Dawson, do we draw for position? Very well, then." And he drew a slip of paper from the box offered by the head keeper.

"No. 7," said Sylvia, looking over his shoulder. "Come out to the starting line, Mr. Siward. All the positions are marked with golf disks. What sort of ground have we ahead, Dawson?"

"Kind o' stiff, miss," grinned the keeper. "Pity your gentleman ain't drawn the meadows an' Sachem hill line. Will you choose your dog, sir?"

"You have your dog, you know," ob- served Sylvia demurely, and Siward, glancing among the impatient setters, saw one white, heavily feathered dog straining at his leash and wagging frantically, brown eyes fixed on him.

The next moment Sagamore was free, devouring his master with ca- resses, the girl looking on in smiling silence, and presently, side by side, the man, the girl and the dog were stroll- ing off to the starting line, where al- ready people were gathering in groups, selecting dogs, fowling pieces, com- paring numbers and discussing the merits of their respective lines of ad- vance.

Ferrall, busily energetic and in high spirits, greeted them gayly, point- ing out the red disk bearing their num- ber, 7, where it stood out distinctly above the distant scrub of the fore- land.

"You two are certainly up against it!" he said, grinning. "There's only one rougher line, and you're in for thorns and water and a scramble across the backbone of the divide."

"Is it any good?" asked Siward.

"Good—if you've got the legs and Sylvia doesn't play baby!"

"If?" she said indignantly. "Kemp, you annoy me. And I will bet you now," she added, flushing, "that your old cup is ours."

"Wait," said Siward, laughing. "We may not shoot straight."

"You will. Kemp, I'll wager what- ever you dare."

"Gloves? Stockings—against a cig- arette case?" he suggested.

"Done," she said disdainfully, mov- ing forward along the skirmish line, with a nod and smile for the groups

the appointment of McKnight, who is the choice of Judge Sanderson.

McKnight has had experience as the cashier of the bank of Benton county for twelve years, while his ability and integrity are unquestioned. The Am- bia depositors favor the appointment of S. B. Boyer of Logansport. From present indications, Judge Sanderson will be in no hurry to appoint a special judge, and the matter has, there- fore, been left at a standstill.

The Governor Wants to Know.

Muncie, Ind., Jan. 8.—Governor Hanly has arrived to study the strike situation here. He will thoroughly look into the matter, and if he decides that the situation does not warrant keeping the troops here they will be recalled. There has been a rumor to the effect that the Muncie political situ- ation had something to do with the strike and the rioting here.

Pretty Children Missing.

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 8.—Robert and Edward Hosinski, eight and six years old respectively, disappeared from the front porch of their home while playing and have not since been seen. They are children of John Ho- sinski, a Polish marchant, and noted for their beauty. It is feared they have been kidnapped and are being held for a ransom.

now disintegrating into couples—the Page boys with Eileen Shannon and Rena Bonnesdel, Marion Page fol- lowed by Alderdene, Mrs. Vendenning and Major Belwether and the Tassel girl conveyed by Leroy Mortimer. Farther along the line, taking post, she saw Quarrier and Miss Calthness, Captain Voucher with Mrs. Mortimer and others too distant to recognize moving across country with glitter and glint of sunlight on slanting gun barrels.

And now Ferrall was climbing into his saddle beside his pretty wife, who sat her horse like a boy, the white flag lifted high in the sunshine, watching the firing line until the last laggard was in position.

"All right, Grace!" said Ferrall brisk- ly. Down went the white flag. The far ranged line started into motion straight across country, dogs at heel.

From her saddle Mrs. Ferrall could see the advance strung out far afield from the dark spots moving along the Fells boundary to the two couples traversing the salt meadows to north. Crack! A distant report came faintly over the uplands against the wind.

"Voucher," observed Ferrall, "prob- ably a snipe. Hark! He's struck them again, Grace."

Mrs. Ferrall, watching curiously, saw Siward's gun fly up as two big dark spots floated up from the marsh and went swinging over his head. Crack! Crack! Down sheered the black spots, tumbling earthward out of the sky.

"Duck," said Ferrall. "A double for Stephen. Lord Harry! How that man can shoot! Isn't it a pity that?"

He said no more. His pretty wife, astride her thoroughbred, sat silent, gray eyes fixed on the distant figures of Sylvia Landis and Siward, now shoulder deep in the reeds.

"Was it very bad last night?" she asked in a low voice.

Ferrall shrugged. "He was not of- fensive. He walked steadily enough upstairs. When I went into his room he lay on the bed as if he'd been struck by lightning, and yet you see how he is this morning."

"After awhile," his wife said, "it is going to alter him some day dread- fully, isn't it, Kemp?"

"You mean like Mortimer?"

"Yes, only Leroy was always a pig." As they turned their horses toward the highroad Mrs. Ferrall said, "Do you know why Sylvia isn't shooting with Howard?"

"No," replied her husband indiffer- ently, "do you?"

"No." She looked out across the sun- lit ocean, grave gray eyes brightening with suppressed mischief. "But I half suspect."

"What?"

"Oh, all sorts of things, Kemp."

"What's one of 'em?" asked Ferrall, looking around at her. But his wife only laughed.

"You don't mean she's throwing her flies at Siward, now that you've hook- ed Quarrier for her? I thought she'd played him to the gaff!"

"Please don't be coarse, Kemp," said Mrs. Ferrall, sending her horse for- ward. Her husband spurred to her side, and without turning her head she continued: "Of course Sylvia won't be foolish. If they were only safely mar- ried. But Howard is such a pill!"

"What does Sylvia expect with How- ard's millions—a man?"

Grace Ferrall drew bridle. "The cu- rious thing is, Kemp, that she liked him."

"Likes him?"

GRAND 5c THEATRE TONIGHT

ENTIRE CHANGE TO-NIGHT.

MATINEE, Saturday, 2 to 5 p. m.

VAUDET 5c THEATRE

TO-NIGHT

'Life of a Cowboy'

'When the Bees are in the Hive'

Song by Miss Wrenick.

The Hoosier Vaudeville circuit opened at the Grand theatre in this city last night for the first of weekly performances to be given here on each Tuesday night. The company played to a full house and each act brought forth applause from the well pleased audience.

On account of illness of some of the performers engaged, and substitute acts introduced, the bill was made a bit top heavy with singing acts, but the audience enjoyed it nevertheless. One of the notable features of the crowd present on the opening night was the large number of women present, which proves that Rushville has become educated to high class and polite vaudeville, and do not longer look on it—as they do in some rural communities—as being trashy and vul- gar varieties. The show was clean throughout.

Rushville has long needed something like this and the mangement of the Grand is being complimented for put- ting on such a pleasing attraction at popular prices. Tonight the Grand will present an excellent moving pic- ture program and Miss Brown will sing the illustrated song.

"The Life of an American Cowboy" at the Vaudet tonight and tomorrow night is a picture of western life and is very interesting. Indians capture a girl and compel her to ride a horse at runaway speed down hills and across dangerous places; her lover goes in pursuit and lifts her from the flying horse. While they are sitting on a stone talking of the adventure, a rival cowboy attempts to shoot him, but an Indian maiden comes to the rescue and saves the two lovers.

Miss Wrennick will sing "When the Bees are in the Hive."

Too Broad a Hint.
"You've got a fellow in there that won't wait on me again, not much," said an irate customer, as he emerged from the dining room and slapped his money down on the pay desk. "I'm not stingy," continued the customer, "and don't mind giving tips, but when a waiter hangs round till a fellow has nearly finished eating and whistles 'Do not forget me,' I think it is about time something was done."—London Mail.

PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR FINANCES.

Nation's Panic Partly Due to Extravagance, Says Financier.

WHAT ECONOMY WILL DO.

Stuyvesant Fish Shows How 85,000,000 Americans Can Save $1,551,250,000 In a Year—Judge Gary Predicts Improvement Soon—Business to Be Done on Higher Plane.

Extravagance on the part of the whole nation and failure to punish or remove from their places of trust the men who have been shown to be offenders against the laws are two of the causes for the recent financial panic given by Stuyvesant Fish in the annual financial review published the other day by the New York Post, which also gives interesting predictions by men of great prominence in business and financial matters as to the outlook for 1908. Mr. Fish says:

"When our 85,000,000 people do economize and really save something daily the figures will roll up with amazing rapidity, for if each of them should save on an average so small a sum as 5 cents a day it will aggregate $1,551,250,000 in a year."

Tracing the causes of the panic, Mr. Fish says that whenever state or federal inquiries have been made in insurance, railroads or local traction matters corruption has been unearthed and five or six well known names have always cropped up. He adds:

"The guilty parties show no signs of repentance, much less of making restitution. Nor have the chief offenders resigned or been removed from the positions of trust and confidence which they have so greatly and frequently abused to their own profit and to the loss of their stockholders. In the light of these and similar facts, it is strange that the large deposits in our own savings banks and in the national banks in the west and the vast amount of money actually held by the people, especially the foreigners among us, are not seeking investment in corporate securities despite the excessively low prices now prevailing."

Continuing, Mr. Fish says regarding the future:

"At the risk of seeming pessimistic I cannot help thinking that as the prime cause of our present troubles has not been removed we must undergo a period of depression and curtailment in business and again learn in the hard school of adversity the lesson of economy. Nor in the absence of a restoration of confidence in corporate management is it possible to say when a change for the better will come about."

"Let us hope we are nearing a period when time and an awakened public conscience will remove from power some of those who have been the chief sinners, and economy will restore the losses created by the waste, the extravagance and the wickedness of the last few years."

Ex-Judge Elbert H. Gary, directing head of the United States Steel corporation, primarily ascribes the recent panic to exposure of the condition and management of certain banks. In accounting for the violence of the panic he says:

"The volume of business had been greater than the supply of money. The imperfection of our financial system had a large influence. People had been unreasonably extravagant in personal matters and also in business methods and expenditures. More or less mismanagement in large affairs was being exposed, and investors were surprised and frightened."

As to the question whether the resultant depression will be long or short, he says:

"It requires courage to make public an opinion in regard to the future. The depression should not be long continued. There ought to be a noticeable improvement in business before the middle of 1908 and a decided improvement before the end of the year."

Of the encouraging factors in the financial and industrial future he says:

"The wealth of the country is great and is growing greater. The necessities of the country are constantly increasing. There are both ability and disposition to spend money when confidence is restored. The experiences we have been passing through during the last year will ultimately be of great benefit. Business will be done on a higher plane. Every one will be more disposed to recognize the rights and interests of others. There will be a better observance of the laws. The people generally will be less extravagant for a time at least. The great prosperity of the future is fully demonstrated by the facts and figures of the past."

Of the changes needed to prevent a recurrence of the panic Judge Gary suggests:

"We should have more elasticity in our banking system. I think the best suggestion yet made is a central bank, not for commercial purposes, but as a depository of the surplus funds of national banks and perhaps for the issue of bills."

Melville E. Ingalls, chairman of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railroad, says:

"The panic of 1907 was caused primarily by the overtrading of our people and the large expenditures by corporations of all classes. Its violence was caused by the fact that corporations had been so abused by people in high authority that the ordinary man had lost all confidence in them, and therefore when the trouble first broke out the common people believed that it was due to dishonesty and rascality and that there was nothing good, and therefore they hastened to take their money out of the banks and keep it where they thought they would surely find it.

"I should think that the disease, being so severe, would run its course quickly and that there should not be a long period of depression. Still, I doubt if we shall have good times until we have another crop in sight and also get far enough to see into the next presidential election and learn what we are going to have—whether the persistent attacks on the integrity and credit of corporations are to be kept up.

"The factors of encouragement are that there have been so few failures and the financial interests of the country have acted so well together to stop the spread of the trouble."

Lyman J. Gage, ex-secretary of the treasury, in suggesting methods for preventing future panics says:

"Banks should be compelled to meet their contract obligations to pay on demand or be wound up. Before this at present impossible condition is exacted, however, legal facilities should be provided by which the power now lacking should be supplied or re-enforced."

CHINESE TIDBITS.

The Way Vegetables and Meats Are Preserved by the Natives.

In China turnips, several varieties of cabbage and seaweed are often prepared for winter by giving them a coat of salt and drying in the sun. A vegetable resembling cabbage is sometimes dried in the sun without salt and put away in shallow baskets until ready for use. They have a way also of making a kind of sauerkraut very much as Americans do. The treatment of certain vegetables in this way is a common practice. The best native hams come from a region known as the Kin-hua district, in Chekiang province. The hams when dressed and ready for curing are carefully placed in vats. A kind of pickle is then prepared of salt, water and a sauce from the soy bean, which is poured over the fresh hams. After the hams have been in the pickle a sufficient length of time they are taken out and hung up to dry and occasionally, but not often, smoked, when they are ready for the market. Sometimes a little nitrate of potash is also added to help preserve them, but this addition is the exception and not the rule. It is reported that in the south hams are cured by means of an alkaline earth and common salt, but so far as can be learned no earth of any kind is employed in the middle and northern provinces. The famous pickled eggs of China are preserved with a pickle made of common mud, salt, saltpeter and soy bean sauce, all mixed together. The eggs are coated with a plaster of this mixture and laid away until ripe, when they are ready for the table. Prepared in this way they will keep several months.

PAPER MAKING IN KOREA.

Hermit Kingdom Supplies Best to China and Japan.

It is not generally known that the best kinds of paper met with in China and Japan are the product of Korea. It is claimed by many that the Korean paper excels the very best that is made in China and Japan. It is produced entirely by manual labor and without the use of any machinery. The raw material used for the better kinds is obtained from the bark of the Prousonetia papyrifera, which is collected in the spring and beaten in water containing a large admixture of wood ashes until reduced to a thick pulp.

This is taken in large ladles and spread upon frames of bamboo so as to form thin sheets. Another kind of paper is made from old scraps trodden into pulp, much in the same way that grape juice is extracted in some countries, and, though this mode of pulping is slow, it has the advantage of not breaking the fiber so much as when machinery is used.

After the pulp has been made into paper the sheets are piled up to a height of six feet and then cut into pieces, to be again subjected to the stamping with the feet. At the same time the roots and seeds of a plant called tackpoo are added, the soluble parts of which are supposed to give tenacity and toughness to the paper.—Exchange.

Reminded Him.

A negro pastor was warming up to the climax of his sermon, and his auditors were waxing more and more excited.

"I wahns yer, O my congregashun," exclaimed the exhorter—"I wahns yer against de sin uv fightin'; I wahns yer against de sin uv whisky drinkin'; an' de sin uv chicken robbin'; an' I wahns yer, my bredder, against de sin uv melon stealin'."

A devout worshiper in the rear of the church jumped to his feet and snapped his fingers excitedly.

"Whuffo does yer, my brudder, r'ar up an' snap yo' fingers when I speaks uv melon stealin'?" asked the preacher.

"Kaze yo' jes' minds me whar I lef mah overcoat," replied the devout worshiper as he hurried off.

OUR TREES IN DANGER

Doomed Unless Native Birds Are Protected, Says John Davey.

HAVOC WROUGHT BY INSECTS

Our Only Hope Lies in American Birds That Feed on Them, Says Tree Lover—English Sparrow Must Go, He Declares—Cats a Serious Menace to Birds.

John Davey of Kent, O., whose lecture on trees and their diseases is attracting national attention, has been chosen to give the opening lecture at the great summer school in Chautauqua, N. Y., says the Kent (O.) Courier.

The intense interest recently shown in Dayton, O., and in Yonkers, N. Y., indicates that a great national campaign is about to be inaugurated for the restoration of the native birds.

William Dutcher, national president of the Audubon society, was at the Yonkers meeting and said: "I am an Audubonist not from an aesthetic but from an economic standpoint. Our societies will gladly co-operate with the civic leagues to help save the trees by the restoration of the native birds. The agricultural department at Washington informs us that $800,000,000 damage annually is done to the crops of the United States by insects and this through our folly and slus of destroying the native birds."

Mr. Davey shows in his lecture that in fifteen years Ohio and the adjoining states will be treeless if the "fall webworms" cannot be brought under control. Already they are throughout the woodlands, and it is beyond human power to control them. "Any tree," he says, "defoliated five years in succession will perish." Again, he says: "Going from Pittsburg to Marietta on the B. and O. last fall I saw thousands of hickory and walnut trees standing—dead, killed by the caterpillars. They first attack the wild cherry, then the hickory and walnut trees, then the apple, elm, alanthus—indeed, anything and everything. The gypsy and brown tail moths are sweeping westerly from Massachusetts, and our only hope is from our God appointed friends, the American native birds."

The English sparrow must go, for it will not allow the bluebird, the oriole, wren or any of our insectivorous birds to stay near a human dwelling. These are driven from our homes by this abominable pest—the English "house sparrow." Then in the nesting season these innocent little fellow workers of ours (the native birds), whose main living is the larvae, grubs, borers, etc., become a prey of the hawk, crow, red squirrel and other enemies that prey upon them.

Passing through the woods at Mr. William Rockefeller's estate at Tarrytown, N. Y., one morning last May, I noticed the crows flitting from shrub to shrub. I called the superintendent's attention to it. "Why," said he, "there are probably a thousand crows in this region, and this time of the year they do little else but hunt for young birds. Within all these beautiful woodland surroundings there is scarcely a songster heard."

In a discussion following Mr. Davey's lecture in Yonkers the facts were there brought out that the domestic cat is one of the worst foes of the birds. Said a gentleman: "We have a pet cat. None of us has ever seen it catch a mouse or a rat, but last season it brought fifty-two young birds into the house." An Audubonist said that his society had considered the "cat nuisance," and there are estimated to be 60,000,000 cats in the United States, and that most of these would have to be shot or taxed out of existence.

Said Mr. Davey: "Without the trees man could not live. Without the aid of our native birds the trees will surely perish. I am told that in the south every boy big enough to carry a gun, whether he be white or black, spends his winter months in shooting and shipping robins, catbirds, orioles, redwings, meadow larks, etc., under the name of 'reedbirds.' Will the nation awake and save the trees by restoring and protecting the birds? Will not the newspapers speak to the people?"

Maine's Wasted Wood.

There are 15,000 cords of wood at a modest estimate going to rot in York county, Me., according to John Merserve, the agent for the Biddeford Record, who knows every crossroad and about every farm in the county. This wood is left by the portable mills in the shape of tops. It is not cut up, because it would cost more than it is worth to haul it to market, so it lies there rotting on lots stripped by the portable mills, says the Kennebec Journal. Mr. Merserve says that he was offered as much as he wanted of oak, maple and beech tops for 30 cents a cord. In some cases, where the stripped lots are near enough to make it worth while, farmers are saving their own wood and cutting up this refuse for fuel, paying 25 cents a cord. In one lot over in Lyman he estimates that there are 500 cords of good wood going to waste.

Wisconsin's Banana Crop.

The banana crop in Wisconsin is reported to be flourishing, and a full yield is certain, says the Washington Post. The crop is of six years' growth and is inclosed within the limits of one room in the horticultural station of the University of Wisconsin. In other words, the one tree in the university is also the only one in the state, and it is growing nicely. There is one small bunch of bananas on it.
